In their studio in IJmuiden, where light drifts softly across the floor and silence hums with memory, Visser & van Leeuwen create worlds that balance between design and reverie. Neither purely artists nor designers, they are storytellers of form and space- constructing environments where imagination and reality merge seamlessly.

Each work begins with a journey, not necessarily far from home, but always inward. Through color, material, and line, they translate fleeting sensations into physical form. Their pieces feel like echoes of forgotten moments or dreams half-remembered: familiar yet untethered, intimate yet elusive.

In this work, a fragment of an image -part object, part memory- becomes something new. The everyday transforms into a tender fiction, a visual pause where nostalgia and curiosity intertwine. For Visser & van Leeuwen, creation is not about arrival, but about the act of wandering itself: a search for meaning in the quiet spaces between what is seen and what is felt.
