An exceptional pair of gem-set earrings by Van Cleef & Arpels

An exceptional pair of gem-set earrings by Van Cleef & Arpels, made in 18 karat yellow gold, each composed of a large coral cabochon at the top, surrounded by brilliant-cut diamonds and chrysoprase cabochons. Each earring suspends a striking tassel featuring a domed coral cap set with brilliant-cut diamonds, from which hang seven strings of chrysoprase beads interspersed with rose-cut diamond rondelles. The strings terminate with coral and gold beads.

With clip fittings. Total diamond weight: approximately 12 ct.

Signed VAN CLEEF & ARPELS and numbered. Dated 1971.

Dimensions: 8,5 x 1,87 cm.

These Van Cleef & Arpels earrings from 1971 are exceptionally rare, embodying unparalleled craftsmanship and luxury. The bold combination of coral, chrysoprase and diamonds is both exquisite and uncommon, while their intricate tassel design reflects the golden era of Haute Joaillerie. Signed and numbered by one of the most prestigious jewelry houses, they are true collector's items, akin to owning a piece of history - 'Elizabeth Taylor-level' rare.
